

Attend the 2016 Public Education Partners Conference, October 14

There's still time to register for this 9th annual conference, which will focus on "Addressing Opportunity Gaps in Public Education," at the Columbia Metropolitan Convention Center. Keynote speaker for the morning conference will be Nikole Hannah-Jones, award-winning journalist with The New York Times, whose work on segregation in American schools has sparked a national conversation about public policies on education, housing, and beyond. Speakers for the afternoon's WhatWorksSC luncheon and award presentation will include Dr. Gerrita Postlewait, Superintendent, Charleston County School District; Dr. Russell Booker, Superintendent, Spartanburg County District 7; and former US Education Secretary and SC Governor Dick Riley. Registration for the day is $95.00. Simply visit www.scfutureminds.org/register.
